

The future of our country depends upon how we answer one simple question: How will we control the rampant population growth that is crippling our economy and destroying our environment.

This may sound forbidding, but it is not inevitable. In fact, our future can still be bright and positive with the help of average citizens just like you.

The two most important changes we can make include reducing our current birth rate and limiting both legal and illegal immigration.

For example, instead of providing tax breaks for larger families, we should be providing incentives for smaller families.

When it comes to immigration, less is more. The entire world depends on a healthy and robust America rather than one that is bursting at the seams.

You can help reverse our current overpopulation trend. Start by visiting NPG.org and becoming familiar with both the problem and the solution. Then take action.

Share this information with your friends, family and social networks. In addition, contact your state and federal lawmakers and suggest ideas for improving America. It's not too late to improve the future for our county and for our children. Please take action before time runs out.
